

ROCK-A-BYE: THE TWIST

Kathaleen Hornberger and Carrie Lundell
Brigham Young Univ., Provo, UT 84602

If you didn't wear stirrup pants and sailor collars before you got pregnant, why start now? This was our motto when designing this line of maternity wear. We also wanted our clothes to accentuate the beauty of pregnancy, not hide it. We feel today's clothing market is extremely lacking in clothing choices for mothers-to-be. Our clothes are specially designed for the higher-class woman whose lifestyle does not change once she becomes pregnant. This lifestyle includes attending formal occasions.

This dress is made from "dip-dyed" silk georgette. The soft flow of the fabric gently drapes over the maternity figure. The bodice twist adds interest to the dress while accentuating a pregnant woman's best feature, her chest. The layering of fabrics gives the dress a soft elegant feel while pleats in the skirt give the needed room in the stomach area.